

NEWS NOTES FROM TRINITY COLLEGE

Centenary of Lincoln Observed. Law Students Admitted to Bar.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]
TRINITY COLLEGE, DURHAM, N. C., February 14.—Professor E. C. Brooks, of the department of education, is in the Eastern part of the State, where he went several days ago to attend some educational meetings and to deliver some addresses. He will return to the college the first of the week.

Centenary Observed.
Last night in the Young Men's Christian Association Hall, in Epworth Building under the auspices of the Trinity College Historical Society, the 100th anniversary of the birth of Abraham Lincoln was fittingly commemorated. A program consisting of two speeches had been arranged for the occasion. Dean William P. Few, of the department of English, delivered an address on "Lincoln's Personality and Style," and Dr. William K. Boyd, of the department of history, delivered an address on "Lincoln and Southern Problems." The celebration of the centenary of the birth of this great American statesman is being observed throughout the country generally, but at no place could the exercises have been more appropriate and more interesting than the exercises here Friday evening.

The addresses were superb in every way, and were full of great interest. A large crowd, composed of students, members of the faculty and others in the community, was present, and the occasion was one of the most significant. The work of the Historical Society in this college cannot be estimated. The great interest it has shown in recent years and the earnestness with which it does the work in its territory are matters of common knowledge to all who live in the community, and no more significant fact could it ever hold than the one Friday evening.

Licensed to Practice.

K. C. Sidbury and L. A. Tomlinson, students in the law department here, went to Raleigh at the time the State board gave the examination to applicants for license to practice law, and both the young men stood successful tests, and are now in possession of their licenses. It was the first time that either would stand the examination until the summer. Mr. Sidbury has studied law for the past two years at Chapel Hill and here, and Mr. Tomlinson has been studying in the law school here during the past two years. Both of the young men will continue their work here during this year.

Extra Course.

A few days ago Prof. E. C. Brooks announced that he would give an extra course in the department of history of education—to all those students who contemplated teaching, and who had been unable to take his work. The course will be a one-hour course, and a general outline of those points of interest in the history of education. Professor Brooks met all those who were interested a few days ago and made arrangements for the time of the course. Quite a number of the male students, members of the senior class, met with him, and from now on the end of the year this extra course will be given with a view to assisting prospective teachers for preparation for school work.

Arranging for Debate.

There was an important meeting of the Debate Council a few days ago, the purpose of which was to arrange definitely for the preliminary for the Sewanee-Trinity debate, the first of which series will be given in Craven Memorial Hall here during the week of Easter.

College Notes.

Dr. William H. Glasen, of the department of political economy, went to Wake Forest Thursday to represent this institution at the celebration of the seventy-fifth year of the history of that college. He returned to the college yesterday.

Professor John C. Wooten, of the department of biblical literature, went to Raleigh this afternoon, where he will preach to-morrow.

At her home in West Durham last week Mrs. W. B. Boyd entertained the board of the society composed of young women at the Woman's Building, and the occasion proved to be a most pleasant one for the large crowd present.

SERVICE FOR U. S. S. MINNESOTA

The sterling silver service recently completed for the battleship Minnesota is the most notable in many respects of any yet designed. The style is that of the French school, of the Transition or later Louis XV. period, and is composed of the finest materials.

The punch bowl, shown with its accessories, is undoubtedly the largest and most elaborate piece borne by any vessel of the navy. It has a serving capacity of seventy-five plates. Its total weight, with plateau, is over 1,000 ounces. The body is divided into eight large panels, the front panel are the Union Jack and the Minnesota, 1906. On each panel is a decorative arrangement of the State flower—the rose. Above the panels is a wide band bearing the name of the State in large letters—in relief, flanked on each side by the eagle, heraldically displayed.

The handle is formed by an allegorical figure, symbolizing the elements—the fish form of the lower body representing the sea, the body—the earth and the wings—the wings members (taking the place of arms) symbolizing the air. The bowl rests on an elaborate composition consisting of four repetitions of a group showing Neptune and Amphitrite with their emblem, the fore part of the decorative ship, ornamental cannon, festoons of laurel, dolphins and shell work.

The whole composition suggests naval supremacy.

The eight smaller star form of the bowl is a motif repeated in many pieces of the service, being an allusion to the title of the State of Minnesota, "The North Star State," which appears in the motto on the State seal, "Etoile du Nord." Both sides of the bowl are alike, so that it may be viewed from either side. The service throughout is of the highest standard and will bear comparison with the greatest products of the silversmith's art.
